The Languages Learning Area's Whakataukāi is:

Ko tōu reo, ko tōku reo, te tuakiri tangata. Tīhei uriuri, tīhei nakonako.

Your language and my language are expressions of identity. May our descendants live on and our hopes be fulfilled.

The whakapapa and meaning of the Learning Languages Whakataukāi

The Learning Languages whakataukāi came from Tāmaki Makaurau through Rewa Paewai of Auckland College of Education, gifted by the late Tuteira Brightwell Pohatu of Ngāti Porou.

The Learning Languages Whakataukāi brings to life the why and how of language learning.

Communication is a vital aspect of human connection. Language helps us to share our ideas, build relationships, and create communities. There are inextricable connections between language, culture, and identity. Languages carry within them cultural values and practices that have developed over time, including cultural protocols such as tikanga.

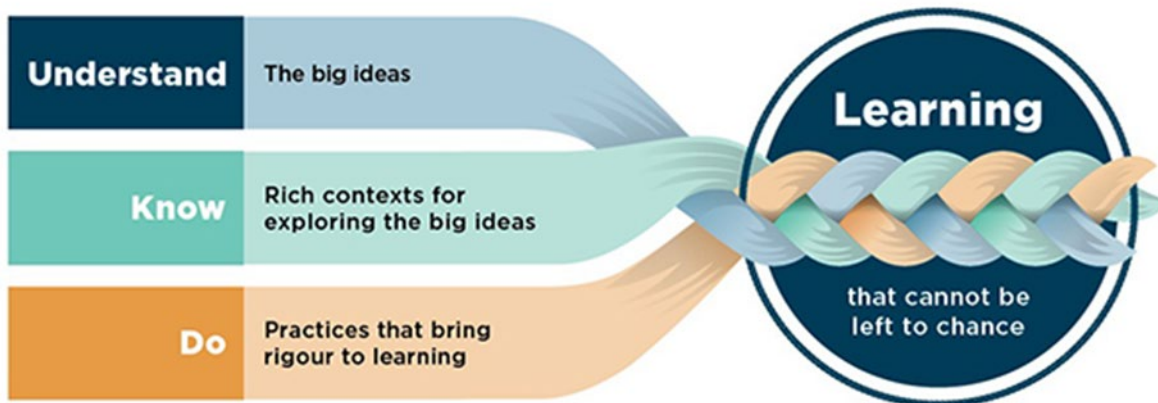

There are strong connections between the movements in the Māori creation story and the process of language learning. Like the movement from Te Kore (nothingness) to Te Pō (darkness and night) and finally, Te Ao (light and life), language learning brings students on a similar journey.

Learners begin in the state of Te Kore, represented by their initial incomprehension of the language. This is also the state where unlimited potential exists. When students begin their language learning process, they enter the state of Te Pō, where they face all the challenges that are involved with language learning. And finally, through resilience, perseverance, and guidance, students emerge into the state of Te Ao, where they gain a sense of clarity, meaning, linguistic proficiency, and cultural understanding.

The Learning Languages Learning Area, including its whakataukāi, inform our Spanish course Significant Learning – learning that is critical for students to know, understand, and do in Spanish by the end of each Curriculum Level. This covers knowledge, skills, competencies, and attitudes. It also includes level-appropriate contexts students should encounter in their Level 6, 7, and 8 learning.

Big Ideas and Significant Learning for Spanish are collated into a Learning Matrix for Curriculum Level 6 and indicative learning for Levels 7 and 8.

Developing Key Competencies through Languages

Learning languages is inherently about extending the ability to relate to, and interact appropriately with, others in more than one cultural setting through the fine-tuning of linguistic skills. The language learning process itself requires students to manage self, participate, and contribute. The new ways of thinking about the world they will be exposed to will encourage students to think about their place in it as well as how they can use those skills to participate in, and contribute to, their communities and the wider world around them.

Thinking

Students of Spanish will:

- deduce rules, recognise patterns, and use their problem-solving abilities to make meaning with an imperfect set of linguistic skills
- evaluate and choose from a range of vocabulary, structures, and communicative strategies to engage with different audiences, sometimes having to think on their feet to improvise and adapt for different contexts and purposes
- explore and reflect on the many ways language, culture, and thinking influence each other
- compare their own language(s), culture(s), and ways of thinking to those of Spanish language and culture and critically reflect on their assumptions and identities in a way that fosters intercultural competence and global citizenship.

Using language, symbols, and texts

This competency being at the core of language learning, students of Spanish will:

- develop increased proficiency in using language, symbols, and texts effectively to communicate information, opinions, and ideas, not just in the additional language they are learning, but also in their own language(s)
- recognise how choices of language, symbols, or text work together and affect people's understanding of and responses to communications and how they work together in different languages
- think about the type of language which is appropriate to use in a range of contexts and formats and for different purposes and audiences
- expand their ability to express themselves in increasingly independent and imaginative ways and improvise and adapt in a range of communicative situations.

Relating to others

As communication and understanding are prerequisites of relating to others and the very essence of what language learning is about, students of Spanish will:

- build upon their listening skills, recognise different points of view, negotiate, and share ideas, embracing different cultural practices
- explore how language, culture, and identity are interrelated and thereby develop the ability to relate to people, both from other cultures but also their own, with more empathy and insight
- develop an appreciation of diverse backgrounds, experiences, and perspectives in Aotearoa New Zealand and the wider world

- experience how a curious, open-minded, and respectful engagement with the values and identities of others can lead to valuable insights into their own identity and offer opportunities for self-development.

Managing self

Students of Spanish will:

- be encouraged to take ownership of their own learning process and find ways of learning and practising that work for them
- use their understanding of how language acquisition works, for example, lots of input, lots of output, making mistakes as part of the process, and so on, to actively engage in the practice necessary to make steady progress
- build on their own strengths and address their own identified learning needs, setting and meeting their own learning goals
- be involved in reporting processes
- participate actively and responsibly in group activities.

Participating and contributing

Students of Spanish will:

- be encouraged to take risks, learn from mistakes, and take responsibility for initiating and maintaining communication; through this they will gain confidence to participate and contribute in and outside of the classroom with the skills they have
- mature as local and global citizens by getting to know the worldviews and needs of other people
- recognise the interconnected nature of societies and communities in the world and Aotearoa New Zealand and be encouraged to think of their place in and responsibility to it.
